Philip R. Wandschneider

Associate Professor
Department of Agricultural Economics
Washington State University
Pullman WA 99164-6210

e-mail: pwandschneider@wsu.edu

Education
Ph.D Agricultural Economics (Natural Resource and Public Choice Economics)
    Michigan State University, 1981
M.A. Economics, Michigan State University, 1977
B.A. Psychology, Economics, Occidental College, Los Angeles, CA, 1969

Research Interests
Major fields of interest include: conservation economics and policy, resource valuation, and economic evaluation. Current dust/PM10 project is to survey farmers regarding their adoption of conservation practices.

Recent Wind Erosion/Air Quality Related Publications

Technical Support Staff
Selma Kavezeri, Research Associate. Selma is a PhD student from Namibia with an interest in conservation economics and survey methods. She will be assisting in development and implementation of a new survey of farmers’ conservation practices in the Palouse.